WHO SHE IS

Shirley St. Hill was born 47 years ago in the Brooklyn district she now represents. Her formal qualifications include 22 years of political experience in New York as a civil rights leader and state legislator and three years as Congresswoman, ten honorary degrees from colleges and universities and a masters degree in educational administration.

Shirley Chisholm was a teacher and director of the city's largest day care facility for nine years. She was elected by popular vote to the State Assembly, then to Congress in 1968 in an underdog race similar to this one. When assigned to the House Agriculture Committee, she refused to serve, and, instead, joined the House Educational and Labor Committee, a post that would both utilize her experience and benefit her constituency.
